A seguir também você encontrará um lista aos melhores cassinos com ramgã assim na cadastre no brasil: Todos esses cassinos são legítimos e confiáveis”, We are nothing if not thorough and here, joining our features explaining fourfolds, fivefolds and sixfolds, we have yes, you 1 guessed it (or just read the title), all you need to know about 7-fold betting. First a spot of what 1 we believe they call “housekeeping” in the business world: this type of bet is sometimes called a sevenfold, others may 1 call it a 7-fold or a 7 fold or just about any other variation. We will use the terms interchangeably 1 and they all mean exactly the same thing.

The second point to note is that as we already have a number 1 of similar articles (linked to above, plus others), we will point you to those as appropriate, rather than repeat ourselves. 1 In short, this piece will provide you with the basics about sevenfold betting but you can find more detailed information 1 elsewhere on the site.

What Is a Sevenfold?

is an accumulator bet, or acca, that has seven different, unrelated selections. 1 These selections, which are often referred to as picks, legs, bets, or, even folds, must all win in order for 1 the overall bet to win. The simplest baby acca of them all is the double and in our feature on 1 doubles (which are essentially twofold accas) we explain how you can include virtually anything you want into an acca.

The only 1 exception, generally speaking, is that the various selections, in this case seven of them, must be unrelated. We don't mean 1 they can't be in the same sport or related on a general level (for instance, seven bets on over 2.5 1 goals but in different matches). The bookmaking concept of related contingencies is something we look at in most detail in 1 our doubles feature. In simple terms, it means that the different legs of an acca must not have an impact 1 on the probabilities of each other.

This is because the odds for each leg, as quoted by the bookie and then 1 subsequently added to your slip and acca, are calculated independently of each other. So, for example, the odds for a 1 football team to win 2-0 already “include” the odds for that team simply to win. A team might be even 1 money to win, and 6/1 to win 2-0. If such a double was permitted it would deliver effective odds of 1 13/1 and would, of course, win, if the side in question won 2-0. Clearly, more than doubling the odds without 1 altering the prediction would not be fair or reasonable and so this is not possible.

Related contingencies come in many shapes 1 and sizes, some more obvious than others and some more directly and clearly related than others. The good news is 1 that you do not really need to worry about this. When you try to place such a bet online you 1 should receive an error message that your selections cannot be combined. If you are in any doubt, contact your bookie’s 1 customer service staff but as a general rule, including markets or selections from the same game, match or contest tends 1 to not be possible with an acca; such bets are usually allowed via a bet-builder tool or request-a-bet service, rather 1 than as an acca, with these systems using their own algorithms to generate odds that cover all the various elements 1 to the bet you want to include.

All or Nothing Means Big Wins Possible

With an acca such as a 7 fold 1 you either win or you lose – there is no partial win. All seven of your predictions must be correct 1 and, if that is the case, the stake and winnings roll over (accumulate) from one leg to the next. If 1 just one leg lets you down, be it a horse losing by a nose, an over 2.5 goals bet that 1 sees three missed penalties and ends up finishing 1-1, or anything else, you lose all of your stake.

The good news 1 is that should you have the skill (or luck) to land all seven legs, the returns really can be impressive. 1 A £10 bet on seven odds-on football favourites at odds between 1/5 and 1/3 would return almost £56. If we 1 increase the odds on three of the legs that were 1/3 up to evens, that return jumps to almost £190. 1 If all seven legs, perhaps seven draws from the weekend’s football, are priced at between 2/1 and 3/1, a winning 1 £10 sevenfold would see you make a net win of more than £70,000!

For all you horse racing fans that are 1 feeling lucky, if you placed just a £1, 7-fold at odds of 2/1, 5/2, 11/10, 6/1, 12/1, 16/1 and 8/1 1 your net win would be... £307,001.15! A £10 acca on those same selections would land you a cool payday in 1 excess of £3m (subject to any maximum payout restrictions).

Nobody is saying that landing a sevenfold acca is easy. In truth, 1 getting seven winners on a market as seemingly nailed on as over 1.5 goals in football isn’t always easy. If 1 it was, how would the bookies pay for all those shiny shops, sponsorship deals and corporate hospitality days? Certainly landing 1 a racing sevenfold is a serious feat... but there are serious rewards on offer too!

Different Options with Sevenfolds

If the thought 1 of getting seven winners over the line sounds a bit of an ask, how about seven places? As with any 1 acca, you can (assuming all seven of your selections offer the facility), place your 7 fold as an each way 1 bet. This doubles the stake and as normal one half goes on the “to win” part of the bet with 1 the other half on the place.

The bets are independent of each other and as normal, to win both, all of 1 your picks must win. To land the place portion of the bet all must place (place terms and number of 1 relevant finishing positions specific to each individual leg) or be a mix of selections that win and place. Note that 1 no matter how many winners you get, unless all of them win, that half of the bet will lose. And, 1 as with any acca, should even one leg fail to at least make the places, both bets will be lost.

7 1 Folds from Multiple Selections

Another alternative option is to include more than seven selections and then to place bets on all 1 the possible sevenfolds that can be created from them. For example, if you decided to use all 10 Premier League 1 games one weekend, you could place a “sevenfolds from 10 selections” bet. Each sevenfold is individually an all-or-nothing bet but 1 overall you have a bigger margin for error.

If you get seven, eight, nine or, hopefully, 10 of your predictions correct, 1 you will be looking at a return. It should be noted that each of the many different sevenfolds that such 1 a wager includes requires its own stake, making this an expensive bet to place. The more folds and more selections 1 you make, the more stakes you need to cough up. If you placed a fourfolds from six selections bet, for 1 example, there would be a total of 15 different fourfold accas included, meaning that a £5 bet would cost a 1 total of £75.

When we up that wager to a sevenfolds from 10, the number of possible combinations of seven of 1 the games jumps to a massive 120. That same £5 bet would now cost a fairly prohibitive £600! Even a 1 50p bet would set you back £60. However, depending on the odds of each of your bets, getting just seven 1 out of 10 would probably get you a net win, whilst eight or more and you would be looking at 1 a really huge win, even from a small unit stake.

How to Place a 7-Fold

Whichever variation of a sevenfold you opt 1 for, most of the best betting sites out there make placing such a wager really simple. Just add your required 1 picks to the betting slip one at a time by clicking on the relevant odds. You'll need seven for a 1 straight sevenfold acca or more if you decide to go down that route.

Once your legs are added, the slip will 1 present you with various options, including each way where relevant and to back sevenfolds if you have added more than 1 seven selections. Just pick which bet you want to make, checking that all the bets you have added are correct 1 and the total stake matches how much you wanted to bet overall... then hit confirm, cross your fingers (and your 1 toes) and wait for the action to begin!
